

This workshop will have two parts. In the morning we will discuss writing as praxis, think about who we are as writers and who we are writing for, formulate writing goals, and engage in writing exercises to practice clear, strong writing. Participants will be asked to bring something they are working on to practice a few writings and editing strategies. In the afternoon we will have a mini-writing retreat. We will dedicate a few hours of uninterrupted time to work independently, but in the presence of fellow workshop participants for support. Learning writing strategies, practicing, and developing a community of support are important for getting writing done and doing it well.